About

Anthony Danza (Anthony Danzl) born in Redmond, WA in 1983. Mother lived in Kirkland & father was from Seattle. The oldest of three children (sister and brother) Anthony Danza's family moved to a small town in Oregon called Warrenton when he was 3 so his father could escape the city life and raise his family. With all of extended family rooted in Seattle the family would drive 3 hours back and forth from Warrenton to Seattle almost every weekend for a long time. During those trips the music that was played was very influential on Anthony, '80s, '90s pop, R&B, soul, rap, etc. Hours and hours in the car would be the training ground for learning an extensive catalog of music where he would memorize and study the sound at a young age.

Anthony Danza would take an interest to music even deeper in high school by creating original tapes and perform at local events and gatherings.

2003 - Anthony Danza moved to Eugene, OR to attend college where he created his own group The Option. He was the driving force and producer for the foursome group of rappers.

2006 - After a few years Anthony Danza moved back up north to Seattle and started his solo career and launched his independent label ProofAvenue. In the short amount of time Anthony Danza has released a few locally noted mix-tapes and has produced for many nationally recognized artists in the music industry.

Producing his own body of work to add what the northwest can now call their own emerging scene. Anthony Danza has been the in-house main producer for Messy Marv over the last few years and also has worked with artists such as Big KRIT, Nipsey Hussle, Killa Kyleon, and many more.
